Roger Mandigo, Professor of Animal Science, has been chosen a member of this year's Meat Industry Hall of Fame. The 12 legends are among the meat industry's "best of the best" and will be inducted into the Meat Industry Hall of Fame on October 30 in Scottsdale, Arizona. The new members were chosen from a list of nominees by the Hall's Board of Trustees and the Members of last year's inaugural class. The nominees included an all-star list of executives, scientists, innovators and association leaders from all sectors of the industry. Formed in 2008, the Meat Industry Hall of Fame is the permanent repository for the accomplishments of the meat, poultry and livestock industries' leading figures and epic events.
