HORSEMEN’S UPDATE 2020

Lincoln, Neb. – December 2, 2019– The University of Nebraska–Lincoln Extension is pleased to announce its Horsemen’s Update 2020, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., Jan. 22, 2020, at UNL Animal Science Complex on East Campus.

“We want to get the newest information to our extension staff and producers to keep them abreast of what’s going on in the horse industry,” Kathy Anderson, UNL Extension Horse Specialist, said.

We have a great list of topics on this year’s update covering a very interesting presentation on establishing pastures, mare breeding basics, biosecurity at horse events, teaching horsemanship, and more. It will be a full day of great information from some wonderful experts.”

Guest presenters are equine specialist Krishiona Martinson from University of Minnesota, equine specialist Kris Hiney from Oklahoma State University and veterinarian Dr. Mike Black from Nebraska Equine Veterinary Clinic.

Other presenters include: Kathy Anderson, UNL Extension Horse Specialist; Lori Jaixen, UNL Equestrian Team Coach; and graduate student Brooke Parrish, UNL Horse Judging Team Coach.

Topics include:

- Horse pastures – planting and establishing
- Mare breeding basics – what you need to know

- Biosecurity during horse events for both show management and participants
- Horse health updates and concerns including diseases in the news (EHV-1, vesicular stomatitis, strangles, and others)
- Tips on teaching horsemanship to riders of all levels
- Inspiring horse judging – keeping it simple
- New programs and events to watch for!

The cost per session is $20, if registered early, or $25 at the door. Lunch and materials are provided. Please register online at <https://go.unl.edu/nsmb>. Register by January 17 to get the discounted price.

You can also view the live presentations remotely if you contact your local extension office. Can't make it that day? Sign up and you will be able to view all the presentations at your convenience.

For more on how to connect remotely or for other information on the Horsemen's Update 2020, please contact Kathy Anderson at 402-472-6414 or email kanderson1@unl.edu. We look forward to your participation.
